

COVID-19 and Other Vaccination Policy

Health Care Related Programs

(January 2022)

Thiel College requires that all students in graduate and undergraduate health care related programs receive a COVID-19 vaccination and other vaccinations.

A religious or medical exemption may be granted by the Thiel College Office of Student Health and Wellness, based on submission and review of appropriate documentation. Thiel College is committed to providing a safe, inclusive, and recognizes observance of faith as it pertains to the practice of immunization. Please contact the Office of Student Health and Wellness for more information regarding applying for an exemption.

Individuals with an approved exemption may be required to comply with COVID-19 testing and other preventive requirements as specified in the exemption approval and as may be updated by later notification and/or posting of requirements on the Thiel College website. In the event of an outbreak on or near campus, individuals holding exemptions may be excluded from all campus facilities and activities, for their protection, until the outbreak is declared to be over.

Individuals enrolled in health care training programs and holding exemptions may not be able to be placed at clinical rotation sites. Failure to complete the required clinical experiences will interfere with progression through and graduation from the health care training program.
